

POSTMASTER KILLED BY TRAIN

Grace O'Brein, Postmaster of Oak Lawn and Husband Are Killed When Flier Hits Sedan

Postmistress Grace O'Brein and her husband, Wm. O'Brein, of Oak Lawn met tragic deaths last Friday morning when the Wabash St. Louis flier Chicago bound hit the sedan in which they were riding as they were crossing the railroad at the Cook Avenue crossing both being killed instantly. The flier was 45 minutes late and was making up lost time when the fatal crash came. The sedan was literally torn to bits by the terrific impact, part of the wreckage being taken from the engine pilot at the 95th street crossing.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. O'Brein were hurled about 35 feet along the right of way and both were instantly killed. The train crew picked up the bodies and took them to the Hursen Undertaking rooms at 1820 South Michigan Boulevard, Chicago.

Engineer J. O. Barns of the flier said he had whistled for the crossing, but Mr. O'Brein failed to hear it. A freight engine on another track was emitting smoke and steam and this is thought to have obstructed Mr. O'Brein's view of the approaching flier. The crossing is entirely unprotected, being without flagman or warning bell.

Mr. O'Brein was 52, his wife, 44. They were married about 10 years ago, the second marriage for both, and have a young son Donald and a daughter, both born in Chicago. They are Mrs. John Koehler and Roy O'Brein of Chicago, the former a school teacher, the latter an employee of the Federal Reserve Bank.

Mrs. O'Brein also is survived by two children by her first marriage, Louis, 21, and Vernon Gunther, 19, both employed in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brein have resided in Oak Lawn for the past 10 years. Mr. O'Brein was a piano tuner by trade. Mrs. O'Brein had served as postmistress of Oak Lawn for the past four years. Only last fall they moved the post office to new quarters in the Emery Block.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the late home at 96th and Cook Ave. Hundreds of people attended the last rites conducted by a reader of the Christian Science church. Burial took place in the Forest Home Cemetery at 12th street and the river road. There were over a hundred cars in the funeral cortege of the double funeral. During the funeral procession 95th street was blocked against regular traffic.

The floral offerings were the most profuse and beautiful ever seen at any funeral in Oak Lawn, it being estimated that fully $1,000 worth of floral pieces were sent, the two caskets being literally buried under this mass of blooms as tho to hide the grimness of the tragedy. Among the many floral tributes were beautiful floral pieces from Congressman Elliott W. Spruhl of Washington, D. C. representing this district. He also sent the following telegram of condolence to Mayor John T. Emery of Oak Lawn: "Your telegram received. Am inexpressibly shocked and grieved. Convey to the bereaved relatives of the deceased my heartfelt sympathy." Other floral offerings were from the Chicago Daily News, Evening American, Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce, Village Board of Oak Lawn, Local School Board, all business places of Oak Lawn, business concerns occupying Emery Block, and a wreath from J. O. Barns and his fireman.

Mr. O'Brein was a director on the Oak Lawn school board and the flag on the school house was at half mast Monday.

FIND BODY OF
SLAIN GANGSTER
AT OAK LAWN

Chicago's gangster warfare was brought to the very doors of Oak Lawn Sunday morning when the lifeless body of Vito Bascone, said to be a member of the notorious Genna gang, was found with a bullet in the head lying in a ditch at Central Avenue near 82nd st., by Chief of Police Eichler and Percy Morrow. This makes the 9th gangster of the booze ring to be taken "for a ride" and their bodies found within the boundaries of the Township of Stickney.

Bascone's death was commanded by the friends of Henry Spingola in vengeance for the latter's murder a month ago. That much the police learned. Further, Bascone had quarreled with the Spingolas. And from the under current seething in Little Italy came the suggestion that Bascone was not far distant on the night Spingola's body was weighed with a dozen lead pellets.

The slain Sicilian owned a home at 3120 West 54th place, away from the sharp eyes of Little Italy, and he was loved by his wife and three children.

The car of the dead Sicilian was found at the bottom of a quarry between 82nd and 84th streets. The police believe that Bascone picked up his slayers, was killed by them, and his body hurled from the car, which was then abandoned at the quarry.

Contented Citizens
A Towns Best
Asset

Passing along a street near the railroad station the other day, the writer's attention was called to two gentlemen who obviously were visitors in Oak Lawn. Coming a little closer to them, we couldn't help but overhear one of them remark: "This looks like a good town. Business seems to be thriving. A fine lot of buildings, good stores. And everybody who passes us or of whom we inquire for information seems to be so wonderfully CONTENTED. Wonder why it is?"

That statement set us to thinking. Coming from a stranger within our midst it impressed us all the more. Evidently, those two strangers had fortunately encountered people who were truly proud of our fair town and glad for the opportunity of letting others know it.

Be a Booster! Speak a good word for Oak Lawn. Keep smiling a sincere, friendly smile and always be ready to extend a cherry welcome to the stranger within our gates. Best of all, extend a helpful hand to your neighbor. You'll make him CONTENT with his surroundings and his contentment means happiness for you. And both of you will soon be Oak Lawn Boosters!

This was one of the worst tragedies Oak Lawn has ever had and the sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved ones. Besides the children above mentioned the deceased are survived by a grand child and by Judge Frank J. O'Brein and Mrs. Mae Hayes, brother and sister of Mr. O'Brein.

SOUTHWEST TOWNS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE LAUNCHED AT ORLAND
TO BOOM NEW STATE HIGHWAY

On February 13th the following notice was sent by the various presidents of the village boards of five Southwest towns:

"You are cordially invited to attend a meeting to be held in the high school at Orland, Ill., at 8 p. m., Saturday, February 20th, for the purpose of organizing a Chamber of Commerce, or Southwest Highway Association to act as a unit for all municipalities in expediting the proposed new southwest highway which in all probability will be started this year.

"There is no question but what a new hard road of this character directly serving all towns along the Wabash, and indirectly those located to either the right or left, will be of vast importance in building up this hitherto more or less neglected territory and we are sure that if we can all get together and put our shoulders to the wheel that we will all be well repaid for what little effort we put into it.

"We think it is generally agreed that the sooner this new artery is completed the better, and we sincerely hope that we may have the pleasure of your presence at the meeting in question.

"We will appreciate your acknowledgement and to avoid confusion, same should be mailed to Dr. W. R. Schussler, Orland, Ill., not later than Feb. 17.

W. R. Schussler, Pres. Orland.
Harry Wood, Pres. Worth.
Arthur Meyers, Pres. Chicago Ridge.

John Emery, Pres. Oak Lawn.
Ed. Tourtelot, Pres. Palos Park.
As a result of the above notice about 100 people representing the above villages were assembled last Saturday night at the Orland High School.

The meeting was called to order by Dr. W. R. Schussler of Orland temporary chairman followed by the selection of B. F. Rolfe of Worth as temporary secretary and Dr. Knox of Orland as temporary treasurer.

Dr. Schussler then gave an outline of the proposed route starting from the northeast at about 73rd Street and Western Avenue leading south west parallel with the Wabash railroad through Ashburn, Oak Lawn, Chicago Ridge, Worth, Palos Park, Orland and direct southwest to a junction with the Wolf road then a branch to go west to Joliet and a south branch direct to Kankakee. The right of way of the proposed highway is to be 100 feet wide with two 20 foot drives on both sides of a parkway in center.

—OR I DIE—

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian half-breed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mator, on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maltre, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Dahlgren, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidently well bred and educated, she is a mystery to Brampton. He intervenes to prevent a man, English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. A Frenchman, Francois Narbonne, slightly demented by stories he has heard of the riches of the New World, introduces himself. Bienville accuses Brampton of treachery.

"I can hold deceit to be excusable when you are fighting against the galleys," he answered. "I have not intended to insult you, simply to speak what is in my heart. Monsieur Brampton, you know the Indians of the valley. You must know that a declaration of war, posted within the limits of any French settlement, would never be left for you to bring to me. And I have heard the news from no one else. Enough of this. I trust the English as I would that lying Recollet priest Hennepin, who did so much mischief by his cursed false description of this country."

There was nothing for me to say; and I stood and stared out over the Gulf.

The governor continued in a cold, brittle voice—

"Pennsylvania has sent out scouts for three years on the Ohio and the Mississippi to learn what the French are doing."

"Yet Governor Spotswood, only this last spring, reported to the Lords of Trade that the French 'have a settlement at Habbamalas.' I was told this in Canada by a friendly Carolinian. It shows that Spotswood's scouts have been ten years in learning what the French are doing."

It would seem that the English scouts are a small danger."

He wrinkled his brows in perplexity. If it were what he charged, then I must be of but small value to the English for not having reported the Alabama settlement in 1717, when I first visited the lower river. As a matter of fact I had never dreamed that my countrymen were in ignorance of conditions which had existed ever since 1710.

After a brief silence he asked:

"You say the Spaniards have visited the Missouri by an overland trail from Santa Fe?"

"They joined the Paducah near the Kansas river, intending to raid Fort Chartres. The entire invading force was killed by the Osage Indians."

"But you did not say this before, that they were killed, that they came to attack Chartres!" he cried, now betrayed into a bit of excitement.

"I considered the thing most important to you to be the fact that there is an overland trail to Santa Fe, practical for troops. I save unimportant, but interesting, details for friends. There is no danger to Fort Chartres."

"We will go back in your boat," he muttered, leading the way to where the two Mators were impatiently waiting for me. With them were two women. "How do I know the Natchez have declared war?"

The question satisfied me he was beginning to weaken, to doubt my guilt.

"Impose your cursed sentence and have done with it," I exploded. "But do not insult me further unless you are ready to give me satisfaction."

As I grew hot he grew cold and eyed me curiously.

"The governor of Louisiana can hardly fight with a felon. He will not fight with a friend," he quietly remarked. "If the Natchez have struck the Warrior's Post—and I will soon learn the truth—I shall suspend sentence on you until I can probe deeper into the deserts. Here, you, Jules Mator! We go back at once. We have no room for women. They must go in the packets."

"But please, Monsieur your Excellency," pleaded old Jules, "these will be our wives."

"Not while you have Indian wives on Lake Borgne," growled the governor. "I will not have the Choctaws about my ears because their adopted brothers are playing fast and loose with their women. You two young women will return to your companions. Not a word, Mator, I am in a bad mood. Up with that sail and set me across with all haste."

The voyage was uneventful until we drew near the Deer Island channel and sighted a small pirogue rounding the eastern end. Bienville rose to his feet, snatched up one of my robes and waved it back and forth until the two men in the pirogue observed the signal. A moment of hesitation, and then they shifted their course and paddled briskly toward us. They were thin, wiry, dark-complexioned fellows of the pronounced French voyageur type, and both were strangers to me.

"Ho, Jean Dumouy, what brings you here?" demanded Bienville.

"A speaking-bark from Monsieur le Page du Pratz of Bayou St. Jean, your excellency," replied the fellow holding to the side of our boat, and using the Indian term for the written message.

The governor read the communication with compressed lips; then asked: "You have just arrived?"

"With all haste. Yes, your excellency. We were making for the fort when we saw the boats and turned back, thinking to find—"

"Enough! Go to the fort and get food and drink. I will have a message for you to take back."

As the pirogue dropped away Bienville reread the message with frowning brows. Du Pratz had spent much time among the Natchez. Knowing the message was from him I was not surprised when Bienville came aft and informed me:

"You heard the boatman. Monsieur du Pratz writes to inform me the Natchez have declared war for the Month of Peaches. Some of his men brought the news down the river. They must have been close on your heels."

I recalled my impression of the object in the river moving behind the mass of drift. As I remained silent Bienville stiffly added:

"I make my apologies for seeming to doubt your word."

"You owe me no apologies. I owed it to myself to tell you with all haste, seeing that I make free of the lower Mississippi where you rule. Perhaps my motive was a selfish one; perhaps I feared the Natchez in going to war might mistake me for a Frenchman and stick an ax in my head."

"We will have a talk later," he muttered, his powerful mind already forecasting the future and seeking ways and means to mollify or block the Natchez. "I do not say I shall lift the peace calumet to you; but just now I feel more tolerant."

Like the shares of the Mississippi company my stock was going up. I knew my promptness in bringing the Natchez news had proved to be the strongest kind of medicine for me. And in a like manner have I often escaped a dangerous climax by stumbling upon some situation which I could twist to my own use and benefit. I was entirely composed by the time we landed on the east shore of the bay near Fort Maurepas.

Bienville led the way to a grove of pines and threw himself on the needles and motioned me to take my ease. He began:

"Monsieur Brampton, I have decided that I believe you when you say you had nothing to do with the desertion of my soldiers. There would be no reflection on your personal honor if I were forced to believe to the contrary. Nor have I any proof that you are an English spy. Now, monsieur, you have lived much along the river. Tell me what you consider to be France's greatest help and her greatest hindrance in developing the Mississippi valley."

Promptly and truthfully I answered: "You are her greatest help, your excellency. France's belief in myths and fairy-tales is her greatest hindrance."

"But your governors believe in mines among your mountains."

"That is not believing in myths and fairy stories. There may be mines there. Mines are often found in mountains. But we do not colonize for mines. Englishmen clear the forests, make homes, plant crops. They press forward slowly, making sure of the ground they spread over. When the first colonists came to Virginia there were many adventures among them. Like the Spanish and French in Florida and Louisiana they wanted quick wealth. Some went mad in their hunt for pearls after finding them in common use among the Indians. Then came men and women who built cabins and planted crops. They spent no time hunting pearls."

With a sigh he said:

"True. The good God knows I have always urged that colonists be sent over who would work the soil and raise families. My brother Iberville prophesied that the English would control the whole continent within 100 years if we French did not take root up and down the valley. And you may have seen today what kind of colonists they send me! What are your plans?"

Our wandering talk, ending with the pointed question, satisfied me he had been laying an ambush for me. I yawned sleepily and said: "I have none. By and by back to Canada. Perhaps a trip into the West among the Indians of the plains."

"You dare not go back to the English colonies?"

I laughed grimly.

"Virginia or Carolina would give many pounds to get me there."

Which was true in a fashion, for my budget of news was easily worth a good price now that the English were awakening to the fact that the French were thick among the Alabamas.

Bienville rose and brushed the needles from his coat and said:

"You are English, monsieur. I have made my decision. The English have their spies up and down the river. I, too, have spies on the coast. One of them should be showing up any time now—if he has not been killed. He will bring your complete history. You are what you claim to be, or an enemy of France. I must know the truth."

"I thank your excellency. I only hope your man is painstaking and honest."

"He is what he is, but he will bring an honest talk to me. He is very wise. You must stay here until he returns."

"I am under arrest?"

"No, no. Simply my guest until I can give you a clean bill. Damaon will be most careful to get the facts right."

There was a mist before my eyes that was not from the steaming water. There was a chill in my heart that even the Louisiana sun could not dispel. Yet force of habit permitted me to wear a mask of indifference, but it was a moment before I dared trust my voice. Then I said:

"I am glad Damaon is the man to look me up. He will make no mistake. He will not hold back for fear of discovery, and then come here and report lies to you."

"I rejoice you accept it so amiably. It encourages me. You are free to wander about."

With a laugh I accepted the situation and humorously remarked:

"If your excellency had not placed me on bounds I would have been content to idle away a month here. Now I am itching to go somewhere else."

"That would be unwise—most unhealthy, monsieur. The climate is bad for those who exert themselves. If a man should lose himself I simply call, and the natives, from the Illinois to the mouth of the Mississippi, hear me and look for that man. I shall be pleased to have you dine with me in the cool of the evening. I must leave you now and arrange for the immigrants to start on their journeys, as another ship is due to arrive any time."

I was thinking of the girl in black, and asked:

"What of Mademoiselle Dahlgren?"

"She is waiting for the boat to France on the Maltre, or must she wait until you verify her story?"

He halted and stared at me blankly.

"Her story? Return her to France? God's mercy, but we've already returned two thousand out of the seven thousand sent over by the company! It would require a most excellent story to get mademoiselle back to France."

"Yet decency and justice demand her return if she was illegally seized by the police in their raid," I persisted.

He smiled slightly, and coolly advised:

"Seek some deep shade, monsieur. The sun has made you believe in fairy tales. The young woman made no claim on my indulgence. She said nothing to me about being taken in a raid. It is too much to expect to find a virtuous woman among those frail ones, but she is young and has much room to mend her morals over here; so I shall see her married to one of Monsieur du Pratz's men and sent to a cabin near the Natchez."

I was astounded. The girl had represented herself to me as the victim of an indiscriminate raid. I thought of her soft hands. I thought of the monotonous corn rations, which the lower Mississippi French refused, except as a famine diet. I was astounded, I say, and yet why should I expect one of her caste to tell the truth? Nevertheless, there was something infinitely pathetic in picturing one so young and so unused to the wilderness being held a prisoner in the forest cabin of a Dumouy. Her frailty was the fault of her environment. But a lonely Mississippi cabin was a terrible price for her to pay unless the men were similarly punished.

Owing to the disturbing revelations his excellency had made about Damaon the Fox I could not give the girl much of my thoughts. The exigence of my own affairs demanded my most careful attention. So as the governor strode away to the fort I wandered toward the shore to concentrate on my predicament. Damaon was deep in my confidence. It was imperative that my Canadian data should be delivered, and his trip up the Ohio afforded me an excellent and safe opportunity. And I had placed in his hands conclusive evidence of my guilt, and the moment he returned it would not be the galleys, but the noose.

Had it been any other than the Fox I might have retained some hope. But Damaon would be most cunning. I could see him presenting my budget of news and thereby winning Spotswood's confidence. I could see him accepted as my trusted friend, eager to sell France for English gold. He would have my history complete once he finished with my countrymen. Over my head hung the shadow of a noose.

"Monsieur," murmured a voice behind me.

I turned, but there was no one except a lot of a soldier standing with his back to me, the butt of his snap-hance flintlock resting on the ground, his gaze turned toward the forest-wall. Before I could question him he was softly repeating:

"Do not look at me, monsieur. Something for you under the butt of my muske. Wait till I am gone before you pick it up."

I pretended to watch the small group about Narbonne. I heard the soldier moving away and gave him half a minute before leaning back on one elbow and securing a folded bit of paper stamped into the sand by the gun. Satisfied no spying eyes were on me I opened it. It was written in English, and read:

"Monsieur the Englishman.

"Monsieur—I bribed a soldier to give this to you. He promised on the Cross. I must escape up the river and to the English settlements. If there is one generous heart in this horrible land to help me I know the good God will reward. When you get this I shall be on the way to New Orleans. His excellency says I am to mate with a creature of the forest. I either go to the English settlements, or I die.—C. D."

CHAPTER IV

One Reason for Leaving Biloxi.

I tore the message into tiny pieces and buried them deep under the sand, and endeavored to analyze the woman's reasons for so dramatically announcing she must make the English settlements, or die. Why not Canada? Being of Paris I would have expected her to make for Canada, and from there take a boat home. She had made no request to be sent back to France, however, although she had told me she was the victim of a police raid.

I should have felt much better about her could I have reconciled her soft hands with a theory of honest poverty.

However, it was not for me to set up as a moralist; her loneliness and suffering made her human. I knew I should help her if it was within my power.

A voice disturbed my meditations by ironically saying:

"Monsieur is buried beneath admiration for this golden bay. I am told that if one skim off the top six inches of water it changes to solid gold over night."

It was the tattered Narbonne. Back of him was Six Fingers, his parchment face leering malevolently. Farther in the background were several of the women.

I lazily remarked: "You two have composed your differences?" With a nod toward the priest.

"La! we are brothers!" simpered Narbonne. "He goes with me to my estate. He is to be my gold-steward. You know, we are to find much gold and many precious stones."

Six Fingers came nearer and in English said:

"Monsieur and I start at once for New Orleans. Will you ship with us that far? I know the coast to the east. I know all the Spanish ports. But clew me to the anchor and dump me overboard if I know this d-d river with its many mouths!"

That Narbonne understood my language was shown by his swiftly cutting in:

"We would take it as a great condescension in monsieur. We plan to catch all the wild cattle on my estate and spin their coats into a rare cloth. He who wears a cloak of this wonderful fabric can never grow old and can never be deceived. Think of it, Monsieur Brampton! To never be deceived! It would make one into a god!"

"Let's talk stuff one can understand," growled Six Fingers.

"There is only one subject to be talked in this marvelous land," cried Narbonne. "Ignorant one, do you not realize that the excess of paper money over bullion is a nation's true credit? That France has the most paper money in the world, and therefore must have the greatest credit?"

"Sweet friend, have done with thy cursed chatter," growled Six Fingers.

The girl's appeal is one to stir any chivalrous heart. How can it be answered?

Giving Him a Lift

A canal boat skipper sat placidly on his rudder handle and smoked, while a horse towed him along the canal. A limping tramp hailed him from the bank.

"Can you give me a lift to the next town, captain?" he asked. "My feet's raw with blisters."

"If I sign you on to the next town will you agree to work your passage, my lad?"

"I will, captain," said the tramp eagerly. "My feet—"

The skipper threw a rope ashore. "Then catch hold o' that rope," he said, "line up alongside the horse, and pull for all you're worth."—London Answers.

Shaft Would Have Value

It is strange that an expedition into the earth's interior has never been seriously attempted. If we could sink a shaft only twelve miles into the ground we might strike all the coal and oil that would be needed in millions of years. In all likelihood we should find radium, gold, silver, diamonds, and other gems of untold wealth, as well as wonderful new metals and fresh sources of energy.—Exchange.

OAK LAWN

A number of the Catholic Women who formerly met at each other's home every second Thursday have agreed to name their club "The Thursday Circle" suggested by Mrs. Landahl at a meeting held at Mrs. DeRuntz's home. A pleasant game of Bunco was played and some prizes were appreciated by the winners, Mrs. Salihar, Mrs. Gavin, Mrs. Theres, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Landahl and Mrs. Eichler. A delicious luncheon was served. All had a pleasant time. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Gavin, March 4th. Mrs. Anna Piper is president of this Club.

Mrs. John Smilde is still on the sick list with a severe cold. We sincerely hope for a speedier recovery.

Oak Lawn is glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. George H. Schussler back to Our Fair City. They have purchased the Chas. Schultz home on 54th Ave., and will soon be occupying it.

Oak Lawn is going to lose some more of their very good citizens. Mr. and Mrs. C.J. Freed and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dutton, both having purchased homes in Longwood and plan to move there about the first of May. We are sorry they are going to leave but sincerely hope they will profit by this move.

The surveyors of the Wabash Railroad are at work setting the stakes for the new gates to be put up at Cook Ave., and also at the railroad crossing at 95th st. Long threatening prevails at last. We will be thankful for this improvement as we can then feel safe in crossing the tracks.

Mrs. Joseph Ryan is Acting Post Mistress, in the place of Mrs. O'Brien. She will soon be appointed permanently.

On account of important Government business at Washington, our friend Congressman Sproul will have very little time to give to his campaign. It surely looks like the people will have to get busy on April 13th, if they want to send him back to Washington to represent them. Congressman Sproul is from our's, the Third Congressional District.

Mrs. Rolland Freed and daughter Betty have been visiting her mother Mrs. John Hayes in Harvey for the past week.

Utopian Idea

God grant that not only the love of liberty, but a thorough knowledge of the rights of man may pervade all the nations of the earth, so that a philosopher may set his foot anywhere on its surface and say, "This is my country." —Benjamin Franklin.

Reach of Gold

Sixteen ounces of gold are sufficient to gild a wire that would encircle the earth.

Duck Refuge

The Winneshiek bottom preserve is a 300-acre tract of land along the Mississippi river. Congress in 1924 passed a law preserving this land from drainage for a breeding and feeding place for ducks. There have been two or three instances where land in this vicinity has been drained for agricultural purposes and found absolutely useless. It was through the efforts of the Izaak Walton league that this land was preserved.

Removing Vitropane

To entirely remove vitropane from glass, take one-half pint of boiling water and a piece of soap sufficient to make a good lather. Saturate a cloth and place cloth on the window. Let stand for a few moments. Take a clean cloth saturated with ammonia (double strength) place on glass for a few moments. The vitropane will begin to loosen and can easily be removed with a thin knife blade.

His Accidental End

There are all sorts of ways of putting things, and some sound much better than others. For example, there is the case of the man of whom Lord Coleridge used to tell, whose father was hanged for highway robbery. Some one asked him how his father died. "Sir," said he "he fell from a scaffolding outside Newgate while he was talking to a clergyman."—Youth's Companion.

S. W. Starr

THE FARMER'S CANDIDATE
for Republican Nomination for STATE REPRESENTATIVE
41st Senatorial District

Vote for S. W. Starr "The Farmer's Candidate" backed by the farmers of two counties and the Farmer's Weekly Review, and let him help solve our Agricultural problems for he has made a study of farming situation and best measures of relief.

"One of the best answers to the charge of favoritism to farmers that I have seen," says Mr. Starr, "comes from the President of the International Harvester Company. It is worth quoting."

The farmers' burden has been greatly increased through class legislation in favor of labor and industry, which does not bring any compensation in the way of return to the farmers. In other words we have raised the cost of his operations and the cost of everything he has to buy through special privileges granted to industry and labor, (by the tariff and other means), all of which he has added to his burden and for which I see no compensation until we reach the time when substantially all he produces may be consumed at home, and that will not happen during the present generation.

This is a business man's point of view but it defines the farmers position correctly.

Farmers are seeking to have some part in determining the price they are to receive for their products and to find the same kind of a market to sell in that they are obliged to buy in. They are simply trying to put the industry of agriculture on a plan of equality in returns with other industries.

Where is the place to begin? In Will County. By electing S.W. Starr, "The Farmer's Candidate."

Our community is now passing through a changing period in its history, and whether we realize it or not we are on the eve of a real estate boom. One of the outstanding in our community at the present is a zoning ordinance. This will protect us from speculators who are not interested in the future of our community.

We are in a stage now when we can plan the growth of our community with very little inconvenience to any one. If we wait until after subdivisions have been laid out and buildings started it will be too late. It will cost us very little to do this now but in a year or so it might cost us a great deal.

A zoning ordinance merely outlines the future development of our village—setting the streets and alleys and the location of the business and residence districts. This does not make it impossible for a poor man to have a home nor does it restrict the rich man. It works for the happiness of all.

Let us show our neighboring communities that we are truly progressive here—now is our opportunity lets not wait and be sorry.

Herbert Bohn broke his arm recently cranking one of the big Reo trucks, but is now almost fully recovered. This accident, however, did not prevent Herb from driving the Ford Coupe.

Mrs. Novatil was operated on recently at the Burnside Hospital and is showing signs of improvement.

Mr. Wilder who has been suffering with a broken leg the past few weeks is able to be out again.

Mr. Harry P. Woods spent the week end at his farm near Ladysmith, Wisconsin.

Mrs. VandeBurg has been visiting her daughter in Chicago for the past week.

Miss Nellie Crandall has been suffering from a toothache and a severe cold the past week.

Miss Margaret Lysen entertained the Evergay Club with a Valentine party at her home on February 11. Each girl mailed her valentines in the box which was all decorated for the occasion with pretty white crepe paper, little red hearts and arrows. Miss Hazel Stromberg acted as post master and Miss Selma Baumlir did the honors as mail man with Miss Ethel Stewart assisting.

After the valentines were distributed, refreshments were served—sandwiches and coffee, pickles and olives, cake and jello with whipped cream; everything just right to tempt the dainty appetite.

One noticeable feature about the members of the Evergay Club is that the girls are right up to the minute. The vogue of wearing the hats on the back of the head, also Lilliums Lovewell, was adopted by practically all of the girls.

The members parted with the promise of meeting again on Feb. 25th at the home of Edna Hosmann when it is hoped all of the girls will be able to attend.

The decorating of the church is now completed and when the bids for the linoleum and seats are received, the church will be ready for use. Mr. Albert Soderlund and Mr. Elmer Lysen are working on the new communion table and when everything is in order, the community will have a church to be proud of and less excuse to fail to attend the services.

The masquerade given by the Fire Department at Hilderbrandt's Hall was a huge success. The large crowd present seemed to have a glorious time and the boys deserve great credit.

The Secret of a Happy New Year

By REV. J. R. SCHAFER
Superintendent of Men, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Philippians 4:11. "I have learned, whatever be my outward experiences, to be content."—Weymouth.

Our world once again is filled with New Year's stimuli. They record their vibrations on eye and ear and hand. Most of them are artificial—much of them is superficial. All constitute a united, annual endeavor to create a spirit of hope and cheer. The new year offers new opportunities, new achievements, new victories. To these, there is mutual incitement. But alas! all gather up into a bundle of wishes. The secret of attainment remains a mystery. We need something more than wishes, beautiful as a sincere indulgence in this custom is. We eagerly long to know how to have a happy new year.

Rev. J. R. Schaffer. These, there is mutual incitement. But alas! all gather up into a bundle of wishes. The secret of attainment remains a mystery. We need something more than wishes, beautiful as a sincere indulgence in this custom is. We eagerly long to know how to have a happy new year.

The aged Christian philosopher discloses the secret which opens the door to this treasure house, before which all mankind has stood and called his cabalistic utterances in vain. It is, to be content in every state, with every circumstance.

I. This Secret Must Be Learned.

"I have learned." Contentment is not innate but acquired. It is the primary objective of all life—its common denominator. Every living soul is in pursuit of happiness and the chase waxed hotter. The multitudes are deceived in thinking it can be overtaken by magic, or seized through some camouflage of the highway; not so, it is learned only in the school of experience. If you would know how to have a happy new year, turn aside on the road of life and tarry where did the apostle and learn this wondrous secret. Sit at the feet of the Holy Spirit, "who shall teach you all things," with the open textbook of God's Word before you and you will be instructed in the mysteries of contentment. Vain are the philosophies of earth that seek happiness as the highest good. It is not a state to be sought but fruit to be produced, the result of cultivation. He must needs study spiritual arboriculture.

II. This Secret Is Sufficient for All Experiences.

"Whatever be my outward experiences." There are few who do not find satisfaction in some of life's experiences. Almost infinite as they are, there is something to meet the selectivity of all. The common lot of mankind is the mingling of lights and shadows, storm and sunshine, pleasure and pain. Our happiness is intermittent, short lived and of uncertain duration. If we could only continually indulge in those activities that satisfy, live in that environment that spells contentment and be absolute proof against all trouble then we would have Paradise regained. Such is not Paul's idealism. No such mocking chimera does he hold up. He has learned the secret of a contented heart for every kind of human experience. The worst cannot affright him—the best cannot deceive. He had run the gamut of trial, of sorrow, of peril, of suffering and knew every tragedy of the soul but in all these outward experiences, he had learned to be content. What a discovery! He wanted all men to share it.

III. What Is Contentment?

"To be content." Contentment is more than the flowers of happiness—the very etymology of the word suggests that these are cut from the happenings of life. Alas, however beautiful and fragrant they, too, soon wither and die.

It is more than the tree of godliness—for the tree may have life with "nothing but leaves." Paul wrote to Timothy that godliness plus contentment is "great gains." "Godliness is profitable" beyond question but add contentment and great is the gain. We need not comment on the discontent of godly people. It is the fruit of the Holy Spirit's possession—the result of His productive activity in the soul. He is life and life is ever begotten and cultured in development.

The only process by which we become Christians is the new birth. "Except ye are born of the water and the Spirit, ye cannot enter the Kingdom of God." The Spirit of God implants His own divine life within us and we are the born ones of God. This life must be cultured by elements similar to those that promote growth in the physical world of nature. All life must have three cultivating factors, air, food (including water), and exercise. The development of the spiritual life is conditioned on the breath of prayer. The food of God's Word and the exercise of service for Him. Faithful culturing of the life begotten by the Spirit produces fruit catalogued as love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, brotherly kindness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control. Such fruit is contentment for every outward experience of life.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean of the Evening School, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for February 28

JESUS TEACHES RESPECT FOR LAW.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 22:15-22; 34-40. GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye think that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I came not to destroy but to fulfill."—Matt. 5:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Lesson on Obedience.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Obeying the Law.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Obeying the Law.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Secure Respect for Law.

It is to be regretted that the lesson committee introduced this lesson, important as it is, thus breaking up the unity of instruction in the Gospel of John. Teachers who prefer to continue in John would do well to choose John 12:1-11 as the alternative lesson.

I. The Tribute Money (vv. 15-22).

The Pharisees and Herodians proposed to entrap Jesus and bring Him into conflict with the Roman government so they came to Him with a subtle question—"Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar or not?" At this time the Jews were galling under the yoke of the Roman government. Some even denied the right to pay tribute to the government. To have answered this question yes or no would have involved difficulty. To have answered yes would have conveyed the impression of endorsement of all that the Roman government did. To have answered no would have at once brought Him into conflict with the government. Christ's reply to this question, properly understood and applied, is the final word on the subject. Until the civil authorities demand of us that which is a violation of God's law, we are bound to render unto them obedience. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's" means that within the realm of the right of government the Christian should yield glad and full obedience. "Render unto God the things that are God's" means the highest obligation. Since enjoying His protection and care, it is our duty to own all allegiance to Him, to yield our lives to Him in service, worship and praise. Everyone who enjoys the benefits of civil government is obliged to pay the taxes which are necessary for the support of that government, and everyone who receives God's favor is placed in like obligation unto Him.

II. The Great Commandment in the Law (vv. 34-40).

1. The First Commandment (vv. 34-38).

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind." This means that supreme and undivided love to God is the first and great commandment. Man's supreme obligation is to God. It is wrong to evaluate man's character on the basis of his morality as expressed in his relation to his fellowman. Real righteousness is doing the right thing with God. The greatest immorality of which a man can be guilty is his failure to respond to the demands of God. The one who does not supremely and with undivided affection love God is the greatest sinner.

2. The Second Commandment (vv. 39-40).

The second commandment is like unto the first in that it centers in love. It is not said that it was equal unto the first; that would not be true. A man may love himself, but not supremely. One's love for his neighbor may be either too much or too little. The measure set is love for self. We should love God better than ourselves. He is worthy of all our affections and demands all. Love is not mere emotion, but a supreme desire for the welfare of another and a willingness to do everything possible to secure that end. The command to love our neighbor is involved in the command to love God. To pretend to love God is folly if we do not love our neighbor. To attempt to establish a brotherhood among men without the recognition of the fatherhood of God is utter nonsense. Men become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. It is true that in the sense of being God's creatures, all men are God's children, but in the New Testament sense, men are only God's children as they are in Christ. The only way to bring in the brotherhood of man is to preach Jesus Christ to the race and secure acceptance of Him. We thus become brothers in the real sense of the term when we have God as our Father. All obligation resting upon man is embraced in these two commandments. Those who conform their lives to them are God's children and are the very best citizens.

Go and Come

There is a mighty go in the gospel as well as come. It is come, go. Go, preach and heal; go, home to thy friends; go, into the highways; go, into all the world. Many Christians do not obey; many churches have no blessing, because they do not go.—B. F. Jacobs.

The Wealthy

When a man begins to amass wealth it is a question as to whether God is going to gain a fortune or lose a man.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Editor of "HEALTH"

TULAREMIA—A NEW DISEASE

ONE would think that with the vast number of ills which afflict the poor human body we had all the diseases we needed without discovering any new ones. One would also think that with the observations and experiences of the centuries every form of disease would have long since been seen and described. Yet every once in a while some observer finds something that has never before been noticed.

In 1912 Doctor McCoy and Doctor Chapin were studying an epidemic among squirrels which was widespread in Tulare county, California. Diseases among wild animals in California have been given special attention ever since the first epidemic of bubonic plague in San Francisco. At that time, owing to the political influences which prevented the United States public health officers from stamping out this disease in its first appearance, bubonic plague was allowed to develop among the ground squirrels in the country around San Francisco. While the plague was later entirely suppressed among human beings it has never been completely wiped out among the squirrels.

In carrying on the work, McCoy and Chapin found a new disease among squirrels which they also found was occasionally contracted by persons who came in contact with squirrels, rats, mice and other small animals. It is carried by lice, ticks, bedbugs and several kinds of flies, especially the deer fly, squirrel fly and stable fly. It is generally most common in June, July and August. It is caused by a small rod-shaped germ which is found in the spleen, liver glands and heart of the infected squirrel.

As usually happens after a supposedly new disease is discovered cases were found elsewhere as soon as physicians began to look for them. Wherever and Lane found a number of cases in Indiana, Francis found seven cases in Utah, one case was found in North Carolina. In the last ten years over 300 cases have been reported. In all cases, inside of 48 hours after infection, the patient develops a high fever with chills, pain and swollen glands. The fever remains high for three days and then is irregular for three weeks. The location of the bite becomes very painful and greatly swollen. The glands near the bite swell and may soften and form abscesses. The patient is greatly depressed, looks sick, loses weight and suffers from great prostration and weakness for two or three months. Beside insect bites, it may be contracted from dressing rabbits and squirrels and so infecting the hands. Doctor McCoy called the disease tularemia, because it was discovered in Tulare county, the only case I know where a disease has been named for one of our counties.

ANGINA PECTORIS

FEW diseases are more feared than angina pectoris, or as it is sometimes called, "palpitation of the heart" or "breast pang," and no wonder for there is no other heart affection that is as terrifying as real angina.

One reason for the fear which it inspires is that it usually attacks strong, robust persons of middle age, who have always considered themselves particularly healthy. A vigorous energetic man about fifty years old, a successful man in his profession or business, a man who works at top speed under high pressure may run up a flight of stairs, sprint to catch a street car or make some special exertion in lifting. Suddenly he is seized with a sharp darting pain in his chest. This pain starts in his heart and runs up into his left shoulder and down his left arm. It is so intense and excruciating that he believes he is going to die. He is afraid to move, to call out, even to breathe. He stands motionless for half a minute, two, three, even five minutes, then the pain gradually passes away.

The patient may feel weak and limp or he may feel but little the worse. He may not have another attack for months or he may have one every day. He may die in the first attack, though this is rare, or he may continue to have them without apparent injury to his general health for years.

It is this very uncertainty that makes the disease so terrifying. Neither the patient or his friends can ever know what may happen.

Naturally a person with angina pectoris learns to avoid overexertion. He learns to eat lightly since an attack often follows heavy meals. He learns to avoid excitement.

His physician probably advises him to keep some pellets of nitroglycerin or amyl nitrate in his pocket to take when an attack comes on. Apparently, the heart itself is but little affected, since between attacks it shows little if anything out of the way.

While not positively known, the cause is generally believed to be a plugging up of the blood vessels of the heart wall itself. If the vessels plugged are small, no serious harm may follow. If a large vessel is plugged and the blood supply to the heart is cut off, death may result at once.

The real cause of bad breath

"You cannot 'cover up' unpleasant breath for any length of time. The only way to rid yourself permanently of it is by removing the cause."

"Sometimes poor teeth are responsible. But the commonest cause of a coated tongue and offensive breath is constipation. You may not realize that your intestines are slow in eliminating waste matter, or that your breath is objectionable. But others will notice it."

"Get rid of constipation, and your breath will become fresh and sweet. Even more important, you will notice an immediate improvement in your health and spirits."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's own way

Constipation is dangerous for any body. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle, and so natural in its action.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today. Remove the cause of bad breath and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished even in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and pitiable and where the patient was helpless.

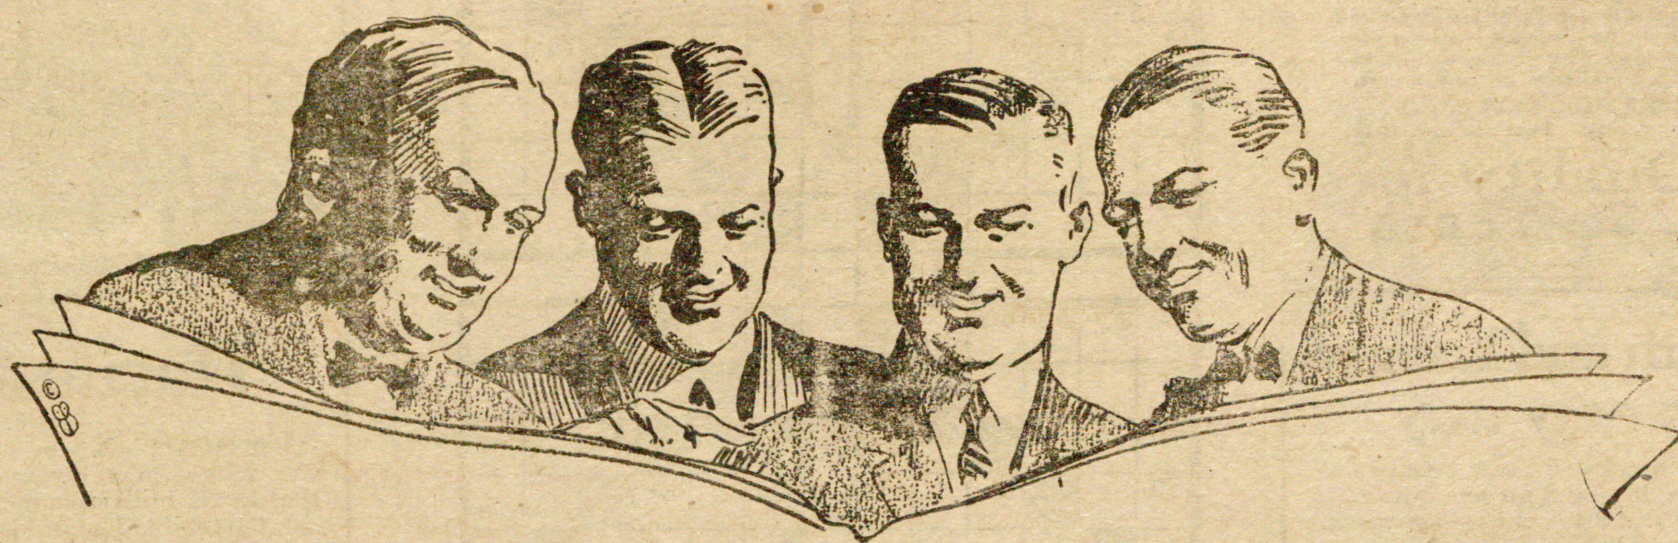

Mr. James H. Allen of 26 Forbes St., Rochester, N. Y., the discoverer of ALLENRHU, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless ALLENRHU decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed druggists everywhere to guarantee it as above in every instance.

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced at Home

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice that anyone in this world can give you is to ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that even Piles are quickly absorbed.

"Content's A Kingdom"

---Thomas Heywood

Every citizen of Oak Lawn should possess it. For, are not the Prosperity, Progress and general Welfare of a great Community best reflected in the CONTENTED DISPOSITION OF ITS RESIDENTS?

Put yourself in the place of the visitor within our gates. If he's of the type who judge as they pass --- and most of them do --- he'll formulate his opinion of us and our town by the welcome he receives, the friendliness he observes about him, the neighborliness of our citizens --- the state of CONTENTMENT we show.

So go about with a friendly smile --- one that you really mean. Speak a kind word for Oak Lawn whenever the opportunity presents itself. Do a kind deed for your neighbor now and then and he'll do as much for you. Make the visitor feel at home by imparting what information you can with a cheerfulness that bespeaks your CONTENTMENT in living in this great community.

Surely, you have every reason in the world to be CONTENT here. Your interests, both commercial and social, are here. Our resources are just beginning to be developed. And yours are the countless opportunities to make this a better place in which to live and enjoy life to its fullest extent.

We, the undersigned professional and business interests, believe that the happy, CONTENTED citizen is a better Advertisement for Oak Lawn than the biggest billboard on earth could be.

Heed this advice and---BE ONE.
